SOUTHERN PECAN GROWERS ORGANIZE

Albany, Ga., July 6.—(Special).—Temporary organization of the Southern Pecan Growers' exchange, which has been in prospect for several months, has been effected with R. B. Smith, of Macon, chairman, and Albany as headquarters. The growers represented in the charter organization will market more than a million pounds of pecans this year, according to the tabulation of acreage and probable yield.

A "co-operative" on the general lines of similar organizations employing the Sapir plan, is designed by the pecan growers forming this new association of producers. It is designed to eliminate waste and speculation, to standardize the nut crop through the various grades, to prevent dumping on the market during the period when prices are most difficult to maintain, to develop a wider field for the use of pecans and pecan products, both in this country and abroad.

It is believed by the men who have taken the lead in organizing this newest south Georgia co-operative marketing association that in a few years the bulk of the paper-shell pecans grown in the south will be marketed through its exchange. In addition to Chairman Smith, the following members constitute the organization committee: R. W. Stone of Thomasville; H. H. Simmons, of Jacksonville, Fla.; and H. U. Jackson, of Macon. These and the following constitute the general organization committee: J. M. Patterson, of Albany; A. M. Wynn, of Leesburg; H. K. Miller, of Monticello, Fla.; J. S. McGinnis, of Rochester, N. Y., who is president of the Northern Nut Growers' association; J. R. Drake, of Putney; C. S. Parker, of Thomasville; and H. A. Penick, of Albany. Mr. Miller is president of the Georgia-Florida Pecan Growers' association.

Five Are Killed, Result of Storm In Pennsylvania

Pittsburg, Pa., July 6.—Five persons were killed during a thunderstorm which broke over the city late today. A man and a woman were killed by coming in contact with electric wires struck by lightning, another man was struck by lightning while standing on the porch of his residence, and two women met death when their automobile skidded on a slippery road while they were hurrying to shelter from the downpour.

"Several Hurdles" Remain to Be Passed On Mexican Issue

Mexico City, July 6.—(By the Associated Press).—"Several hurdles" still remain to be passed before the views of the United States and Mexican governments can be placed into the minutes of the conference of American and Mexican representatives discussing questions involved in the recognition of Mexico. Charles E. Warren, one of the American delegates said before entering what was considered an important session today. These preliminary hurdles, he said, must be surmounted before the "views" of the two governments can be considered as finally presented. The delegates of stories in the Mexico City newspapers announcing that the conference has virtually completed its work and that success is assured has been interpreted as an indirect manifestation of the determination of the Mexican government to meet satisfactorily the views of the United States on adequate protection to United States petroleum and agrarian rights in this country.

MEAT FOR HEALTH

MEAT PREVENTS AND CURES PELLAGRA.

A full knowledge of the cause of pellagra is still lacking. This disease of the poorer people of France, Italy, and our southern states has been studied by Drs. Goldberger and Tanner. They have shown clearly that poor protein is largely responsible for this disease, and that meat (or milk) in adequate amounts will cure or prevent it.

Rickets is a dietetic disease of childhood which affects the bones. Sunlight, fat soluble vitamin, and a proper amount of calcium and phosphorus in the food all aid in preventing and curing the disease. Meat is low in calcium, but rich in phosphorus. Milk and green, leafy vegetables are used to help correct the deficiency. It is sufficient calcium and fat-soluble vitamin are included in the diet, there need be no fear of meat giving rise to rickets. This disease is frequently met in the case of the bottle-fed infant. Mellanby has shown that animal fat and meat have a preventive action.

Scurvy is a skin and bone disease generally associated with a lack of fresh fruits, fresh vegetables and fresh meats. Where these foods are eaten there need be no fear of scurvy. That fresh meat will prevent this disease has been shown by Dana on his trip around South America when fresh meat was the only food used during the time they did not have scurvy. The experience of Stefansson and Amundsen on their trips to the polar regions have demonstrated the same fact.

Meat aids in giving a good state of nutrition to the one who eats it. It is of positive benefit in preventing certain diseases and in fortifying the body against others. It gives a feeling of well being and satisfaction and fitness to one who uses it properly. It improves a diet of cereals and vegetables and makes it adequate. It has been shown at Leland Stanford Junior university, with experimental animals, that the so-called vegetarian diet, improved with nuts, results in under-sized individuals, impairs the reproductive processes, and leads to the end of the groups eating this diet with the third or fourth generation. The addition of meat to this same diet gave individuals of normal size, strength and length of life and gave stability to the race.

In addition to being wholesome, healthful, and nutritious, meat is a food that the family likes to eat and the housewife likes to serve. It is practically ready to be put on the stove when it comes from the meat market, and comparatively little care or skill are required in its cooking. Nearly every housewife can fry ham or bacon, broil steak, or roast beef. Once familiar with the less expensive cuts, such as the chuck, plate, round and brisket, the housewife will find their preparation relatively easy. In general, meat is easily prepared for serving, and although the housewife may not be familiar with the ways of cooking some of the less known cuts she can acquire the requisite knowledge very easily from many good recipe books.

How to Learn the Different Cuts Of Meat and Their Uses.

Careful study of meat charts, personal trips to the meat market, the choice of various cuts from day to day, and the trying out of a variety of ways of preparing them are the best means by which the housewife can gain the most useful information, not only concerning the most advantageous methods of preparing the various cuts, but also concerning their relative economy.

The instruction, directions, suggestions, menus, and recipes given in recipe books are designed to assist the housewife who wishes not only to keep her food expenses at a low figure, but also to prepare the most appetizing meat dishes, and frequently to add some new dish to the family meals.

Factors Which Enter Into The Choice of Meat.

Meat animals vary as to breed, age, sex, size and condition. This naturally results in different grades of meat, and the housewife who wishes to get the most for her money must not only analyze the reasons for such prices. In the first place, a beef animal gives only a little more than half of its live weight in dressed meat. When the dealer divides the meat into retail cuts, he must trim off the surplus fat and remove some of the bone.

Another factor which enters into the selling price is the great demand for the so-called "choice cuts." In beef, these are the sirloin, porterhouse, and club steaks, and the prime rib roasts. They average only about one-fourth of the total dressed weight, but usually bring as much in price as the other three-fourths of the dressed animal. This means that a number of cuts, namely, the plate, brisket, shin, neck and part of the shoulder or rump, sometimes may bring less per pound than the average cost cut at wholesale of the whole side. In general, the same is true of veal, lamb and pork.

In order that the demand for meat may be distributed more evenly over the whole meat animal, thereby avoiding loss from waste, shrinkage, spoilage, and slow turnover, it behooves the careful and watchful housewife to plan the family meals so that they frequently include these lower-priced cuts. As has already been stated, the nutritive value of the less known cuts is relatively just as high as that of loin and rib cuts, so that to use them is, indeed, true economy from every standpoint.

By studying a meat chart for a few minutes, or asking the dealer a few questions, anyone can learn enough about the less expensive cuts to recognize and select them readily.

BACON ECONOMIES

By Marjorie E. Northrop, Department of Food Economics, MORRIS & COMPANY.

Bacon is an economy product as every housewife can testify. For the thrifty housewife views this product from all angles and not from the standpoint of first cost alone. Bacon is one of the most easily digested and assimilated foods. For this reason it is to be found in the diet of the convalescent, who must have nourishing food to rebuild the body tissues and yet foods which will tax the digestive organs as little as possible. In fact, it is a waste of money to discard a variety of uses of the household—for the pie crust, as the fat in the popular spice cake, as the foundation for white sauce and gravies and as fat for frying potatoes.

To be sure of a satisfactory purchase, look for the government inspection mark when buying quality bacon. This stamp, together with a reliable brand name, assures you, as a consumer, the wholesomeness of this quality product.

Bacon is more than a breakfast dish. It gives added flavor and palatability to the so-called cheaper cuts of meat. It adds zest to the roast fowl, meat loaf or fish. For a tasty Sunday morning dish, try this toasted bacon sandwich.

Break one egg and beat until light and foamy. Add as much grated cheese as the egg will hold. Season with paprika and Worcestershire sauce. Spread on two slices of bread and on a top of each slice lay two thin slices of bacon, place under a low flame until the bacon becomes crisp and brown. Serve immediately.

Hines Inspects Base Hospital On Peachtree

After spending a day in Atlanta inspecting Base Hospital No. 48, on Peachtree road, and southeastern headquarters of the veterans' bureau, Brig. Gen. Frank T. Hines, director of the United States Veterans' bureau, left at 7 o'clock Friday evening for Augusta.

Saturday morning Director Hines will make a rigid inspection of the new government hospital at Augusta. His visit to Atlanta Friday was the first he had paid this section since becoming head of the bureau. Joe Sparks, national chairman of the rehabilitation committee of the American legion, with headquarters in Washington, also was in Atlanta Friday, and the two officials visited the ex-service men who are patients at the base hospital, and were guests of the American legion at a noon luncheon.

It is the intention of the veterans' bureau to eliminate red tape in the handling of claims for compensation, hospitalization or vocational training, according to Director Hines.

"While efficient business methods must be followed, the human element must not be forgotten in the mass of detail work," General Hines said. "Everything possible is being done to eliminate delays in the handling of claims, and I believe that changes which already have been made in methods and organization will enable all applications to be handled promptly."

"At the present time there are about 100,000 veterans in the government hospitals to handle every man who has been ordered hospitalized, although in some instances, it has been necessary to send the men some distance from their homes. Under plans now under way we hope to be able to send patients to hospitals near enough to their homes so that their friends can visit them. This is an important matter. The purpose of the work of the bureau is to restore the soldiers to health if they are wounded or sick; to restore their ability to work if incapacitated; to relieve them of physical suffering and mental worries; and if these things are to be accomplished the men must be happy and contented."

MINERS' DEMANDS GIVEN OPERATORS

Atlantic City, N. J., July 6.—The demands of the anthracite mine workers for increased wages adopted in convention at Scranton, Pa., last week to form the basis of a new wage contract to replace the present agreement which expires August 31, were formally presented to the coal operators at a joint meeting today in a beach-front hotel. After the operators had listened three hours to the mine workers' representatives, the mine owners asked for a recess until tomorrow morning.

The operators tonight would not disclose what reply they would make to the 155,000 hard coal miners of Pennsylvania, but the general opinion among those watching the negotiations was that the employers will refuse the demands and ask for the appointment of a sub-committee to reach an agreement.

John L. Lewis, international president of the United Mine Workers, read the demands and then, in a long speech, explained them.

The demands provide principally for a 20 per cent increase in the wage contract, an increase of $2 a day for men paid by the day or month, an eight-hour day, recognition of the union and a two-year contract.

No Material Compromise.
President Lewis said there could be no material compromise of any of the cardinal points, such as wages, hours of employment and recognition of the union. He said the demand for the 20 per cent increase was warranted under present industrial conditions and that the men in the anthracite fields were not receiving wages commensurate with the work they perform, nor were the present wage rates commensurate with the hazards of mining and the hours of work.

Many of the mine workers were laboring 12 hours and more a day and seven days a week, he said. Such long hours, he asserted, were not justified. He called attention to President Harding's statement in Tacoma yesterday that the end of the 12-hour day in the steel industry was near.

Speaking of the check-off, which recognition of the union carries with it, Mr. Lewis said organized labor did not desire to take away constitutional or inherent rights of any working man. The miners' union, he added, did not want to say that man can or can not work in the mines, but it did want to say that if any man works in an organized field he ought to belong to a union.

"Check-off" Abused.
Mr. Lewis said the term "check-off" was much abused, some people taking it to mean that it abridged the rights of workmen. It will be a happy thing, he said, to make the term "check-off" obsolete and to use some other word to describe its function. He pointed out that the so-called check-off was used by coal companies in many regions in deducting from the miners' pay the mine supplies used by the workers, coal purchased by the men to warm their homes, house rent, and some times doctors' fees. He said he knew places where public taxes were deducted from the pay of men by coal companies and turned over to tax collectors.

This could be done he felt that union dues could be collected by the companies and turned over to the local treasurers. It would make more efficient the joint contract and also make for better discipline of the men, Mr. Lewis said.

Drug Store Robbed; Burglars Frightened From Filling Station

Robbery of the drug store of Dr. Wiley King, 70 East Sixth street, and the attempted burglary of the Dunham Oil company's filling station at Piedmont and Edgewood avenues, were being investigated by detectives Friday.

The automatic burglar alarm at the drug store was gained to the door by twisting the lock off the door. A quantity of cigars, cigarettes and other articles were taken, together with a small amount of change, which was left in the cash register.

The automatic burglar alarm at the gasoline filling station frightened the thieves away, after they had saved an entrance in the door.

C. T. Dunham, of the Dunham Oil company, told detectives Friday that the robbers would have been badly disappointed had they succeeded in getting inside of the office and opening the safe, for, due to the large number of robberies of filling stations lately, their employees are now required to take all cash away when they close at night and no money was in the safe at the station the yeggs attempted to rob.

FILE DAMAGE SUITS Actions Totalling $35,000 Recorded Friday

Suit for $25,000 was filed Friday by J. T. Thompson in the city court of Atlanta against the Nashville, Chattanooga and St. Louis railroad. Thompson is a former yard employee of the company, and claims that he suffered injuries when struck by a freight train while at work. He is represented by Attorney Hugh M. Scott.

Mrs. Enice Horton Friday filed suit in Fulton superior court for $10,000 against the Georgia Railway and Power company. She states that she was injured while boarding a car in Lakewood avenue June 4. She is represented by Attorneys T. A. Gunn and C. B. Copeland.

Arnold to Urge Dry Law Repeal On House Floor

Conceding that the house temperance committee in all probability will render an adverse report on his measure to repeal the state prohibition law, designed to place the enforcement of the Volstead act in Georgia entirely upon the federal government, Representative Craig Arnold, Lumpkin county, yesterday stated he would stake his chances for success by attempting to bring the bill before the whole house when the committee verdict is read.

Although many of the legislators are opposed to repeal of the law, said a number of them have expressed themselves in favor of allowing him to address the body on the subject. Doubt as to the passage of the measure, when he moves to disapprove, with the anticipated committee report was expressed by Representative Arnold, but he intimated that later developments, which he said he could not predict, might result in a more favorable attitude toward his bill.

No Policing Power.
"One of my chief reasons for urging the repeal of the state dry law is the fact that Georgia has no policing forces, or a state constabulary, and we can not enforce the law when we have nothing with which to operate," he continued. "There is no co-operation now between state and federal officials, and I believe we would get better results by placing the enforcement entirely in the hands of the federal government."

Fred A. Dismuke, federal prohibition director of the state, denied allegations of the representatives that his agents were not receiving cooperation of officials in a majority of the counties. He named Lumpkin, home county of the repeal measure, as one of the few counties refusing to co-operate. The government, he added, is opposed to any move to nullify the state dry law.

"I do not expect to see another state in the Union follow the example of New York," Senator Walter F. George, of Georgia, has written The Christian Index, a church publication. "The constitution of the United States is mandatory upon both congress and the legislatures of the states."

Opposed to Repeal.
Former Governor Hardwick said: "I am opposed to the repeal of the present law, although I believe, as I have several times stated publicly, there should be some modification of the statute with reference to the possession of a small quantity of intoxicants for emergencies."

Federal Judge Samuel H. Sibley, Chancellor Barrow, of the University of Georgia; Bishop W. N. Ainsworth, of the Methodist Episcopal Church; Dr. R. W. Weaver, president of Mercer university; Judge John E. Hutcheson, Jonesboro; Judge H. A. Mathews, Macon; Judge George P. Munro, Muscogee circuit, and Judge J. D. Humphries, Atlanta, all joining in the superior court, are among others voicing opposition to the measure.

After a conference with a group of agents here, Director Dismuke last Friday said he had nothing to give out at present, but that an announcement probably would be forthcoming Monday. The meeting was held behind closed doors, and it was reported that every prohibition agent in the state had been mobilized in Atlanta, pressing wholesale raids for liquor.

NOTES AND MONEY OF SOLON TAKEN BY SNEAK THIEF

Representative E. L. Adams, of Young Harris, reported to detectives a heavy loss Friday as the result of the activities of thieves in the neighborhood of the Terminal station, several thousand dollars worth of negotiable notes and clothing valued at $100 having disappeared with his suit case he had placed on the floor while he was buying some fruit.

Mr. Adams was waiting to catch a train home to spend the week-end at the time he was robbed. Detectives have been detailed by Capt. T. O. Sturdivant to investigate.

Atlanta Honored By United States Junior Chamber

Roy LeCraw, first vice president of the Atlanta Junior Chamber of Commerce, was elected to the board of directors of the United States Junior Chamber of Commerce at the closing session of the national convention which has just closed in Detroit, it was learned here Friday, upon the return of Pittsburgh, Pa., and Ben Berryman, local delegates to the meeting. The "safety first" activities of the local chamber was commended on favorably by the national body. Cincinnati will be the convention city in 1924, and efforts will be made at that time to have the 1925 session held in Atlanta.

Peachtree Terrace Section Promised Road Improvements

Roads in the Peachtree Terrace section will be improved before fall, declared County Commissioner George F. Hope in an address at a meeting of the Peachtree Terrace Political and Civic league Friday night. The meeting was held at the home of J. W. T. Martin. Since the organization of the league recently a fight for better roads in the section has been in progress.

A vote of thanks was given Commissioner Hope, Edwin Johnson and other members of the club for their efforts in helping to secure definite action in the improvement of the thoroughfares of the terrace.

PLUMBING ORDINANCE AMENDMENT FAVORED

Atlanta plumbers are to regain the right to make sewer and water connections that necessitate tearing up the streets under provisions of an ordinance approved by the ordinance committee of city council in special session Friday afternoon. Bonds of $10,000 will be required before permits for the purpose will be issued in order that the city may be protected against damages resulting from the work. Since January 1 the city construction department has been doing the work at the expense of the plumbers, who contracted for the jobs.

Continue Revival.

The revival, which has been in progress at the South Pryor Street Church of Christ for the past two weeks, will be continued until Tuesday night, it was announced Friday. The preaching is being done by Evangelist W. L. Karnes, of Portland, Tenn. Services are held each evening at 7:45 o'clock.

Valleys may be from 10 to 20 degrees colder than on the hills in winter.

Buttons are now being made from powdered gypsum and it is said possess great durability.

FORGERY OF MONEY ORDERS IS CHARGED TO HERBERT GUBBY

Herbert Gubby, instructor at the Edward Waters negro college at Jacksonville, has been arrested on charges of intercepting and forging and cashing money orders intended for students, it was announced at the Federal building Friday.

Gubby was arrested by Postoffice Inspector Thomas H. Jervy. According to his report to Inspector-In-Charge Joe P. Johnston, a full confession was obtained from the prisoner.

GEORGIA LEADS IN DELINQUENT TAX PAYMENTS

Georgia paid more delinquent federal taxes in May than any other state in the union, according to reports received Friday by J. A. Rose, collector of internal revenue for Georgia. Collections totalling $278,248 were made in this state during the month by 28 field deputies, the report showed, for an average of $9,937, also a national record.

Not only did Georgia lead the states, but the Jacksonville division, composed of Georgia, Alabama, Florida, North and South Carolina, made the best average collection per deputy in the field, the 131 deputies in the division collecting an average of $5,053 each.

In Alabama collections were $37,306, by 22 collectors; Florida, $171,436, by 22 collectors; North Carolina, $150,048, by 41 collectors; South Carolina, $23,683, by 16 collectors.

PLAN REVISION OF CITY HALL PHONE SYSTEM

Revision of the city hall telephone system in the interests of further economy will be considered by the electric lights committee of city council at a special meeting at 10 o'clock this morning, called by Mayor Walter A. Sims Friday.

Plans Are Made To Fight Closing Billiard Parlors

That the billiard parlor is the man's club and is the sole medium of recreation within the reach of his limited means and time, was the keynote of a meeting of billiard parlor owners at 5 Baltimore block Friday as struck by "Dad" Elliott, who, for over two decades, has been actively connected with the billiard business. Mr. Elliott was the principal speaker at the meeting, which sought to organize poolroom forces in opposition to a bill introduced by Representative Woodruff, of DeKalb county, to close up all poolrooms in the state.

Refutation must be provided for the man of limited means and if the billiard parlors are closed the working men, who now play billiards and pool under the supervision of civic and state authorities, will be forced out on the street and the "corner loafer" will find a great addition to their membership," declared "Jack" Carls, whose parlors are located at Five Points.

It was declared that the state and city derived a revenue approximating $108 per table every year, and this income would be cut off if billiard parlors were to be closed as advocated in the bill.

In LaGrange, Ga., two days a week billiard parlors are thrown open to women and instructors are in attendance to teach the fair sex the fine points of the game, stated Mrs. Harry Varnadoe, of the Atlanta Billiard Supply company. Mrs. Varnadoe was of the opinion that, as in all other lines of activity, women will eventually take up billiards and thus an influence will be introduced that will bring such institutions on a par with mixed bowling, which is popular in the northern states.

Two thousand citizens of Atlanta, the majority of them of the poorer classes, play billiards and pool, stated William Haynes, whose establishment is located on North Pryor street. The meeting decided to inaugurate a vigorous campaign against the bill.

PLAN KINDERGARTENS IN ALL CITY SCHOOLS

Kindergartens are to be established in every grammar school in Atlanta at which twenty or more applications for admittance are made for children between 5-12 and 6 years of age, under provisions of a resolution passed Friday at the regular meeting of the committee on administration of the board of education.

Kindergartens already have been established in twenty-three schools, but the age limits were fixed previously at 5 to 6 years. By raising the age limit the committee expects to reduce the number of applicants at such school enough to enable the available kindergarten funds to be spread out among all the grammar schools.

The recommendation of the committee will be presented to the board of education at its regular meeting next Tuesday and indications were Friday that it would be adopted by the full board.

The committee also took final action to authorize the teaching of negro folk songs in the negro schools of the city.

It was voted further to charge no tuition fee for training at the city normal school. Reid Hunter, assistant superintendent of schools, stated that the school system needs every teacher it can get from the school and the committee decided to put no bar in the way of young women who went the training.

GOVERNOR WALKER AND SONS TO BE BARBECUE GUESTS

Governor Clifford M. Walker and his two sons will be among the guests of honor at the barbecue in Piedmont park at 1 o'clock this afternoon, given by the officials of the city parks department. Mayor Walter A. Sims, members of general council and commissioners of Fulton and DeKalb counties will be other honor guests. The Paradise orchestra will play for the crowd during the dinner and several other entertainment features have been arranged.

DR. M. B. HUTCHINS DIES AT HOSPITAL

hemorrhage. He never rallied from the attack and did not regain consciousness.

Members of his family, who were all in New York at the time of the fatal attack, were immediately notified and rushed to Atlanta to be at his bedside.

Educated at Emory.
Dr. Hutchins, who was 60 years old, received his education at Dablonga and at Emory university, and later studied at the Atlanta Medical college, being valedictorian of his class. He took a postgraduate course in New York hospitals on skin and cancer diseases. In later years he specialized in this branch of medical science and lectured on dermatology at the Atlanta Medical college.

In 1892 he was appointed demonstrator of anatomy in the Atlanta Medical college and was for many years secretary of the Atlanta Society of Medicine.

As a writer on scientific medical subjects Dr. Hutchins gained reputation throughout the United States when he was editor and joint owner with Dr. L. B. Grandy of the Atlanta Medical and Surgical Journal until that publication was merged with the Southern Medical Journal.

Dr. Hutchins wrote many works of value to the profession and might be said to be the pioneer physician in Atlanta to use plastic surgery. He was also the first physician in Atlanta to keep case records.

Served in War.
During the war he served with distinction in the United States army as a captain.

Dr. Hutchins is survived by his widow, Mrs. Addie Davis Hutchins; two daughters, Mrs. Kenneth Goode, of New York, and Mrs. Jennie Hutchins Wright; two grandsons, Marlinson Goode and Seaton Wright. Mrs. Hooper Alexander, of Decatur, is a sister.

The body was taken to the undertaking establishment of Barclay & Brandon. Funeral services will be conducted at 3:30 o'clock Saturday afternoon at the chapel, Rev. W. W. Memminger officiating.

JUNIOR CHAMBER AGAIN WILL HOLD SAFETY CAMPAIGN

Plans are nearing completion for the annual "safety first" campaign of the Atlanta Junior Chamber of Commerce, the week to be decided later, it was announced Friday. The body decided to hold the campaign after recommendations by the Atlanta Safety council, Mayor Sims and various citizens. Palmer Blackburn, president, declared he believed the drive this year would show better results than in previous years.

Tailoring System "Fleeced" Hundreds, Boykin Charges

Evidence concerning the activities of an alleged swindling syndicate, believed to have operated in this city early in January of this year, under the name of the Atlanta Tailoring system, with offices formerly at 607-12 Walton building, was laid before the Fulton county grand jury Friday by Solicitor General John A. Boykin.

Mr. Boykin declared that hundreds of Atlantans had been victimized by the concern. He further said that he had the names of 150 alleged victims already, and that the number would probably increase to more than 1,000.

The total losses to Atlantans will probably exceed $25,000, the solicitor general declared, all of the losses reported having ranged from $30 to $5 per person. He asserted that a similar swindle had been operated in Philadelphia last year. Mr. Boykin will request the grand jury to indict the men connected with the tailoring system Tuesday, on charges of larceny. Jordan and Leven, alleged to have headed the system, were arrested on a warrant sworn out by a customer recently.

Lost Persons Die of Fright, States Doctor

New York, July 6.—Persons who are lost in the woods or imprisoned in mines do not starve to death, but are scared to death, Dr. Hugh W. Conklin, of Battle Creek, Mich., said today in an address before the twenty-seventh annual convention of the American Osteopathic association.

"Of course some die of suffocation in the mines and exposure in the woods," said Dr. Conklin, adding that his belief that they don't starve to death is based upon fasting treatment of epileptics. In seventy-three cases he treated in the current year, Dr. Conklin said, the average number of consecutive days each fasted was more than thirty.

Malnutrition is more prevalent in children of the rich than those of the poor, Dr. Jeanette H. Bolles, of Denver, Colo., asserted.

The square feet area of misery in the average case of hay fever was estimated to be equal to that of a bad spread by Dr. T. L. Ray, of Fort Worth, Texas, who declared the autumnal golden rod plague, regarded as being incurable, could easily be corrected by osteopathy. The basis of his measurement of misery, he said, was the area of congested membranes. If spread out flat they would equal the size of a spread with room enough for tucking at the edges.

Amundsen Definitely Abandons Proposed Flight Across Pole

Nome, Alaska, July 6.—(By the Associated Press.)—Captain Roald Amundsen has definitely abandoned his proposed flight across the North Pole from Wainwright, Alaska, to Spitzbergen, according to Gunnar Kaasen, the explorer's dog team driver, who arrived here today on the schooner Sea Wolf from Kotzebue and Wainwright.

REDS COLLECTING ON FALSE PRETENSES

clothing for the needy, bandages for the wounded, they will receive our message more sympathetically. As a splendid method both to se-curse propaganda and raise money the same document offers this suggestion:

Propaganda for Russia.

"It suggests that fifty or one hundred talented children ranging from 10 to 12 years up to 21, be selected from various parts of the country, children's homes in Russia, brought to Moscow or Petrograd and put under the direction of a teacher or manager, and then sent to the United States to give a series of at least 100 entertainments should net our organization at least $50,000 and possibly $100,000. I have not consulted Limacharsky, any of the soviet authorities on the subject, and have not figured on expense, but I am quite sure it would meet with a splendid reception in the United States and would net our work a large sum of money, giving us a splendid opportunity for propaganda concerning Russia."

Within the past year several Russian troupes of artists have appeared in the United States. Before any such organization secures permission to leave Russia an agreement is made that one-third of the net funds be turned over to the soviet government for propaganda work. After Mrs. Bloom consults "soviet authorities" and makes the proper arrangements, they may look for the appearance of this troupe of children appealing for aid for the "starving and suffering" of their native land.

It will be recalled that Charles Harland, the Massachusetts youth who had conscientious scruples about taking the fortune left him by his father, gave his fortune, something over a half million dollars, to the "radicals." Newspaper reports are to be credited to young Harland did not have the same "conscientious scruples" about maintaining two women in his "love nest," for, it would seem, this troupe of children appealing for aid, they call it, the executive committee, is made up of Norman Thomas, Lewis Gannett, Robert Morris Lovett, Roger Baldwin, Harry F. Ward, James W. A. Johnson, John D. Mugens, Scott Nearing, William Foster and Mary E. McDowell. All of these are active on the national committee of the American Civil Liberties union, an organization many times branded as disloyal. Most of these persons during the war sought to obstruct this country in every way possible. Baldwin served a term for his seditious words in jail. The American Civil Liberties union is recognized as a "legal" organization of the illegal communist party of America, and its connection is referred to in a document read to the jury in the trial of Foster for criminal syndicalism. The instrument which gives details of the communist plan to organize the labor defense council, was secured by the government at the time of the Bridgman raid. While the plans there set forth have been put into full operation, the details were not known until this document was secured.

Radicals' "Sucker List."

The "sucker" list of the radicals has been liberally used during the past ten months to secure funds to prevent the law taking its course in the Michigan prosecutions. This "sucker" list is a most interesting document. Recently a gang of international labor racketeers were convicted at Denver and all sent to jail, not when it came to playing the people for easy money they were just plain pickers in the game. Had they ever discovered the ease with which radicals secure the coin, it is safe to say every one of them would be a radical leader and instead of serving in jail would be basking in the limelight of public approval. On one "sucker" list, the fourth name from the top appears that of the wife of a well known governor.

The document secured at Bridgman giving the complete plans of the labor defense council is too long to be printed in full, important as it is, but some valuable references will be made. Attention is particularly called to the fact that this instrument makes no pretense that the labor defense council is a movement to advance or better labor. On the contrary, it sets forth in specific terms that it is a movement to extend communism in the United States; to secure money for the general attack on the working classes; and to "bore from within" legitimate organizations.

"In this campaign our members must persistently and systematically point out to the working masses, that the attack on communists is only a prelude to, and deliberately planned part of, the general attack on the working classes," is one important sentence. And then this:

"The main campaign of our party" (that is the communist party) "is against the government authorities. . . . Our membership must call upon the workers systematically and coherently to disobey the anti-strike injunctions and to carry on their strike duties in defiance of these injunctions. . . . We should diligently work for removing the present restrictions on citizenship and the various anti-alien laws. The 'labor federation' (that is, the communist-controlled labor defense council) 'must also wage an energetic campaign to have foreign born workers become citizens of the United States—not for patriotic reasons, but in order to draw them more into the political life of the country.'"

And so, continues the document in substance, the communist party organizes the labor defense council "in which every member" (that is, every communist) "must take a vigorous part."

Movements Working With Council.

Among the movements acting with the labor defense council, according to the document are the workers' party, the farmer-labor party, the socialist party, the proletarian party, the United Farmers, the I. W. W., the socialist-labor party, various anarchist elements. Above the trade unions, the central labor councils, the Trade Union Educational league, co-operatives and workers' relief and social organizations are to be included.

Continuing, the document reads:

"This council will contain various radical and liberal elements, not all communists, such as the American civil Liberties union; groups gathered about the liberal press like the Nation, the Freeman and the New Republic; liberal and working farmers' organizations like the Non-partisan league and other tenant and farmers' organizations; also men prominent in public life who are willing to co-operate, such as legislators, editors, clergymen, professors and lawyers. Our members must everywhere be most active in this council."

That no communist, by chance, fail to understand the part he is to play in the organization, the documents remain specific, as to his activities, saying:

"Activities in defense of all militant workers and their organization." Militant workers means those who engage in sabotage, violence, rioting, bloodshed and acts of terrorism. "Our members participating in this work should, as much as possible, counteract the prejudice against communists by using the following arguments:

"We should show that it is untrue that we want to break up the unions; that we are not advocates of acts of individual terrorism; that we do not represent any secret Russian interest. Our activities in this council shall consist of:

Activities of the Council.

"Organizing mass meetings; collecting money for the defense of all workers from prosecution of the capitalist; systematically adopting resolutions on a country-wide scale and sending deputations of militant workers to present demands on various governmental bodies for the taking of such concrete steps as the removal of the anti-syndicalist laws and the enactment of special legislation against reaction."

The document goes into detail on the organization of a number of special departments. Under the heading of "Industrial," political work is to be done.

Turn back now to the article on the conference for progressive political action and note the relationship again between this movement and communism. Under the heading "Federation," all foreign organizations are to be handled to extend radical propaganda. A "research bureau" is to be established to compile propaganda information to be used in arguments against the government and large industries. Judging from the presentation of "facts and figures" at the recent conference held in Chicago under the direction of Senator Robert La Follette on the railroad question, this "research bureau" of the communist party furnished the data.

Under the department of "The Press," a most elaborate plan is set forth for securing propaganda, with special stress being laid on that which will result in the abolition of all anti-syndicalist laws and enable communists more freely to preach their doctrines.

Russian-Made Organization.

This organization known as the labor defense council is a purely Russian-made organization. Its first purpose was to secure money to prevent the conviction of communists arrested at Bridgman, but its work has been materially enlarged since it was formed in September, 1922. Within the past couple of months it has again flooded the nation with letters appealing for funds. Yelling for money, it seems, is about the best thing the gang does. One of the latest circulars issued right after the jury had failed of any agreement in the Foster case reads in part:

"April 4, 1923, the day the jury was dismissed, unable to convict Foster, will go down in history as a day of great victory and achievement for the working class. But the job is not yet finished. C. E. Ruthenberg and his 30 co-defendants are yet to be tried. If Ruthenberg or any of the others are convicted the gains won in the Foster trial will largely have been lost. The Herrin men have finished their job. They followed up their first victory with another. They not only won, but they made it impossible for the prosecution to continue.

It will be recalled that the jury did convict Ruthenberg and that Foster must stand another trial.

If what happened at Herrin is a victory, then it is time true Americans became alive to the situation. Oh, what crimes are being committed by radicals in the name of labor! They are fearful to contemplate, and yet how little is being done in this nation by lawabiding, loyal citizens—laborers, farmers, merchants, manufacturers, banks, all—to stem the tide of sovietism!

The real danger to constituted government does not lie in the open work of communists, for they do no open work. Secret adepts of a secret movement that has been in existence for nearly 150 years, wrecking nations and destroying peace and prosperity, they work in the dark with subtle methods. On the surface and to deal with the people are set up innumerable movements and organizations with deceptive names, such as the Labor Defense Council, the League for Industrial Democracy, the Students' Forum, Joint Amusements Committee, Fellowship of Reconciliation, National Bureau of Information and Education, and many others.

Devious Ways of Securing Victims.

Through these movements they enter manufacturing plants, counting rooms, labor unions, women's organizations, farmers' movements, schools, colleges, churches, lycums, public forums—in fact, every walk of American life—and with their underhanded methods they first implant in the minds of those who they thus reach distrust and unrest, then class-consciousness soon intensified into class hatred. When this mental attitude is established the victim is secure. He then becomes an adept to further the same work.

One has but to look around today to see the result. It is apparent on every side. Boys and girls of staid and solid families, whose fathers and mothers through earnest effort laid the foundation for a great people, return from colleges saturated with what they term "industrial democracy," the "pink" name for pure communism.

This series of articles have set forth, in brief, some of the main features of the radical movement in the United States. It remains for the loyal people to refuse longer to be cowed by the wild charges of "denial of the right of free speech," the "denial of the right of free assembly," the vicious assaults on our cherished institutions, and with one accord fight for the law made great by their forefathers, and against the insidious and serious menace today directed from the citadels of the communist leaders at Moscow.

THE PRACTICAL SIDE.

Elbert county is profiting by the experience of the counties of middle and south Georgia and is taking advance precautions against the boll weevil menace.

That county, while in the weevil zone, as are all cotton producing counties in the south today, has not felt the ravages of the weevil as it has been felt in the more southern counties.

Knowing, however, that the weevil is coming, and in full force, the farmers of the county, in co-operation with merchants, bankers and all business men, and even the women's organizations, have organized to combat threatened conditions with a balanced farm program to which all of the producers of the county are asked to subscribe. Reports are that the farmers almost to an individual are pledging themselves to the program, and are reconstructing their operations accordingly.

Following is the emergency program for the balance of the year 1923, based on a one-horse unit:

"Plant additional feed crops, including corn, peas, cane, soy beans, peanuts, hay, etc.
"Save now at least five bushels of corn for each head of stock; these to be planted this fall.
"Plant immediately (not later than July 5) one acre or more of White Spanish peanuts.
"Save every available clover seed at once, so each farm can plant a clover patch this fall.
"During wet spells set out Bermuda grass in pasture land, and cut out weeds, brush and young growth from pastures.
"Every farm that already has three to six good cows in milk, or that has feed for that many, to begin shipping egg cream and feeding skim milk to hogs, calves and poultry.
"Pledge every land-owner in the county to plant a patch of alfalfa during next two years, this to be a money crop and help make Elbert county the Alfalfa County of the south."

Farm experts from the College of Agriculture and the Experiment stations declare this is an unusually meritorious emergency program.

Following, however, is the permanent program and is worthy of especial attention because it carries the "balanced" idea to scientific proportions, and the business men of the county have guaranteed to provide the money markets for cotton, peanuts, alfalfa, soy cream, hogs and poultry products.

Here is the program, based to a one-horse unit:

"Ten acres in corn with velvet beans, soy beans or peas.
"Five acres in cotton.
"Six acres in alfalfa.
"Six acres in oats, followed with peas, beans or other hay crop.
"Three acres in wheat, followed with White Spanish peanuts or peas or soy beans.
"Five acres in White Spanish peanuts.
"One-half acre or more in sweet potatoes.
"One-half acre or more in cane for syrup.
"A year 'round garden.
"Ten acres in permanent pasture, planted to Bermuda and Dallas grass with lespedeza, white clover, burr clover and vetch.
"At least one brood sow (pure bred preferably).
"From thirty to forty hens (pure bred preferably).
"From three to six good milk cows. (These to be put in when sufficient feed is available, sour cream to be shipped and skim milk to be fed to calves, hogs and chickens.)
"Terrace land and increase fertility."

Such a program as this in every county in Georgia, in co-operation with the bankers and business men in providing the markets—local creameries and co-operative sales—will bring a degree of prosperity to Georgia such as never seen before, conserve man-power by which the labor shortage will not be so serious, and mark a new era in the attractiveness of rural life.

This is the practical side of the overreaching agitation today in the interest of balanced agriculture.

WATCH THE TRAFFIC!

Next week there will be several thousand visitors in Atlanta attending the great Elks' convention. While thousands of them will come by train from distant states, other thousands, from Georgia and the southeastern states, will journey to Atlanta by automobiles.

Under normal conditions, when there are no conventions in Atlanta, the streets at the hours of peak movements are congested, both in pedestrian and vehicular travel. The traffic problem, indeed, under usual, or normal conditions, is one of the most serious problems in Atlanta and challenges the most careful attention of the "enforcement" officers. Even then traffic accidents are so frequent that Atlanta's streets are almost notoriously unsafe.

Realizing these conditions in normal times, it is not difficult to look ahead and picture just what the traffic situation will be in Atlanta next week, when probably 50,000 visitors are here, and thousands of them in their own cars.

It will be distressing if any serious accidents occur, and yet they will occur unless there is a most rigid enforcement of the traffic laws, and unless sufficient traffic officials are allocated to the crossings, not only in the centers but throughout the main thoroughfares, to enforce the law and to direct and expedite traffic in an orderly manner. The latter is of especial importance. By the orderly direction of a traffic official who knows his business, jams can be very largely avoided, whereas through confusion, or inexperienced direction, the streets under conditions such as will exist next week can hold thousands jammed for hours within a few blocks.

Every precaution should be taken first to avoid accidents by the most rigid and yet tactful enforcement of traffic laws; and second, to expedite traffic by preventing right angle crossing jams, and other jams liable to occur under the strain of such heavy congestion.

It is to be hoped the visiting Elks will have a good time in Atlanta and that no incident shall mar the pleasures of the week, either for visitors or the home people. The surest way to assure this is to place sufficient men on the traffic job to properly and co-ordinately direct it.

LABOR BOARD WEAK.

Will the public not construe the railroad labor board's appeal to congress against the Pennsylvania railroad as an admission that it is unable to enforce its decisions?

It is unfortunate, for if the board can be defied by the roads it can also be defied by the employees.

The leaders of two of the big brotherhoods, the conductors and the trainmen, are to meet in Chicago on July 9 to formulate demands for increased compensations.

The action of the labor board must have a significant bearing on that meeting, for if the employees feel that the authority of the labor board is a negligible quantity the government's arm that is supposed to function becomes in reality functionless, and the whole controversy between the roads and their employees is thrown back into the same chaotic condition it was before the government assumed its harmonizing functions.

President Harding has time and again made his position very plain in the premises, and so has Attorney General Daugherty. They represent any defiance of the board, whether coming from the roads or the employees; and yet the board itself, by its own action, has weakened its position and practically defied the stiffening influence of the administration.

The whole trouble rests in the fact that congress failed to put teeth into that provision of the Esch-Cummings act establishing the labor board. It was apparently afraid to adopt any compulsory methods, no doubt appraising the political side of the question as it related to the workers. Results, however, have demonstrated that the board as constituted, with an unsteady authority that not even the president has been able to strengthen, is as unpopular with the rail workers as with the executives, or perhaps more so.

There is no doubt a growing sentiment in favor of compulsory arbitration. Public sentiment is a powerful factor, tender and sensitive but potential, and public opinion is beginning to demand public protection, and the paramountcy of public interest.

Public opinion is unhesitatingly saying today, "if the voluntary system of settling disputes in public utilities fails, then in the interest of the public apply more drastic measures."

The Houston Post is "optimistic enough to believe that when every person shall have become the owner of a car, some way will be found to keep people stationary for a sufficient length of time to enable them to make a living."

HEALTH TALKS

BY WILLIAM BRADY, M. D.

ARRIVAL OF THE LITTLE DOCTOR

A nurse trained in the modern high-brow training school receives about as much medical instruction as the physician of a generation ago received. There are many excellent physicians and specialists practicing today, eminent in their communities or their respective fields, who had only two terms of study in medical school, and very short and simple courses. So the agents withdrew a little abashed to the merry shout of laughter.

Petroushka is a little section of old St. Petersburg night life transplanted to private residence on the East Side. The sponsors are members of the Russian nobility—at least they were before the debacle. The decorations are of a barbaric note in Russian splendor.

The chief was a former Russian gourmet who was quite a figure at grand palace parties. Other attaches are by the Moscow and the poly-syllabic press agent—high figures in Russian court life when it meant something.

The performance at Petroushka is a replica of the cellar cabarets of Moscow and Petrograd—clowns with tragic faces, acrobatic experts, women in gay colored hoods, jumping jack dancers and a chorus that strikes the plaintive harmony of the steppes.

It is the last cry of the Russian invasion. Chauve Souris has gone trouping to Paris. The Moscow players left their indelible impression in the higher historic art and several other haunts of Russian birth have departed.

Upstairs at Petroushka is a "cabinet room" for ex-officers of the czar's regime. Here they gather in solemn convalescent times a week, looking at the pictures on the wall and provide a little butter for the lean days. Whiskers are plentiful.

Following the Russian craze, the Egyptian fad is zipping from King Tut's tomb itself. It was only a mild

There is lots of room in the column for many other Georgia geniuses. Perhaps you, dear reader, can turn a wicked rhyme or snap off a witticism. Why not try it out on this column? Don't mind the editor. He's insured to anything. And, who knows, it may mean lasting fame for you.

LET'S HAVE MORE LAWS.
I'm gonna legislate.
Against all kinds of evil.
That's botherin' our state.
Including this here weevil.

Chorus.
Just frame a little bill
If it voters you would care,
And pass it through the mill
Of the Georgia legislature.

There ought to be a law
Against the weevil's clothes.
They're dressin' just like law.
And wearin' gaudy bows.

Chorus.
Just frame a little bill
If it voters you would care,
And pass it through the mill
Of the Georgia legislature.

PRACTICE MAKES PERFECT.
When for the first time Mary felt
The little god of love come nigh,
She wanted to express so much,
But all that she could say was "I."

The next time Cupid gave her heart
The selfsame sort of gentle shock,
Her fainting tongue got just so far
That she could only say "I love."

But when the youth who bore her words
Asked her to finish her remark,
Her coward spirit just turned tail,
And so she added, "Grant Park."

STERILIZING HAIR BRUSHES.
Necessary to sterilize hair brushes before using them? (F. G. E.)
Answer—Some shipments of brushes from Asia carried the spores of bacilli of anthrax into this country and sporadic cases of anthrax in men who purchased and used the shaving brushes made from such brushes caused some alarm. Whether hair brushes might have been made from such brushes, I do not know. A thorough washing with hot water and soap, and drying in the sun if possible—the hair brush should receive such cleansing at least as often as the hair is washed or shampooed. A few of the better makes of hair brushes are sterilized by boiling without harm.

Every Week.
Ben Told should wash my hair every week, as it takes the growth out of it. Is it all right for a girl of 16 to sleep with a lady of 70 years that has feeble health? (RT 117)
Answer—If the scalp is exceedingly oily, or covered with dandruff, it is all right to wash the hair at least once a week, and it will not spoil the growth. Two persons should not sleep together because each disturbs the other's rest, and if one contracts any communicable disease the other is likely to get it. It makes no difference about their age or their physical vigor—myths about such factors need not worry you.

THOMAS FELDER VISITS ATLANTA FOR FEW DAYS
Thomas B. Felder, formerly of Atlanta, now of New York, reached Atlanta yesterday accompanied by his son, Thomas B. Felder, Jr. They will be the guests for the next few days of Clark Howell at his home, Pine Hill.

Mr. Felder is now the head of a prominent law firm in New York—Felder, Zoline, McCrossin and Chordish, with offices at 165 Broadway. He is on his way to Dublin, Ga., where he lived before locating in Atlanta as a member of the bar many years ago. He is to be given a homecoming welcome by his old associates there, after which he is to be entertained by the people of the community which he has been a prominent citizen of since 1922-23 and applications are being received daily. Judging from the number of applications from the city alone, it is expected that the total attendance for the coming year will be more than twice as many as the entire student body of the first year of the life of the institution.

MACDONALD SMITH HAS CHANCE TO OPEN GOLF RECORD

Smith's Short Pitch Shots Highly Regarded by Brown; Outlook for Joe Kirkwood

Kirkwood's Mental Condition Is His Greatest Handicap — He Is Not Steady In Tight Places.

By INNIS BROWN.

The naming of MacDonald Smith as a favorite in this year's open may come as quite a surprise to a good many followers of golf, especially those who have begun to take more than a casual interest only within the past five or six years. For during that time, he has figured only occasionally in open events in California, but he is fully entitled to consideration, as will appear.

Smith, who now makes his home in California, is a Scotchman by birth, having been born in the little town of Carnoustie, which has produced a great galaxy of golfing notables, including his two brothers, Willie and Alex, both of whom have won the United States open championship in past years. He has been in this country for some fifteen years, and he early as 1910 tied with Alex Smith and Jack McDermott for the open championship, though he was beaten by both of these two in the play-off. In 1914, he won the Metropolitan championship with the remarkably low total of 278 strokes for seventy-two holes.

Shortly after winning the above title, he fell into damaging habits, and took no further part in big play until after the war. While the country was in the war, he worked in San Francisco shipyards, and stuck to his work for some time after peace was declared. Within the past two or three years he has been taking the game seriously again, and some three months ago he went back to Scotland, bent on making a systematic campaign toward a golfing comeback in the British open. How well he succeeded readily appears from the records.

After qualifying well down among the leaders, he encountered a very discouraging round of 80 on his first start, in the championship play-off, leaving him a long way back of the leader. But from that point on he played the best golf in the field. His second round was 73 and his third 69. He finished with a 75, after taking only 33 for the first nine holes on his last round. These, considered with his third round of 69, gave him twenty-seven consecutive holes in a total of 104 strokes, or four under par for that distance.

Smith is a real artist in golf, so far as the playing of strokes go, and is especially adept at short pitch shots. Back in his younger days, more than a decade ago, when critics were generally agreed he was a certain champion within a few years, he was rated one of the finest exponents of the short-pitch approach in golf. He has the game and the determination to win the U. S. open. With him, it is a question largely of having the good fortune to have a fair share of the breaks favor him.

Kirkwood's Chance. If anybody ever succeeds in getting Joe Kirkwood into a mental condition where he can maintain the control in actual competition that he can display in playing his special repertoire of

Worthwhile Pegs

No matter who lost or won money on the shindy at Shelby, that little stuck-in-the-mud record of poverty-stricken housewives and oil-gamblers has put itself on record forever in this country. The name of Gallatin, Mont., a station or two removed from Shelby and almost as big, has been a particularly meaning ten years hence. But Shelby will suggest a wild crazy sporting adventure in which a lot of men gambled all they had on the fantastic notion of that 40,000 people could be persuaded to bring a million in gate receipts and other disbursements into a prairie hamlet where some total population wouldn't fill some New York apartment house.

Men now who were just learning to lap the name of Fitzsimmons twenty years ago know just one thing about Carson City, Nev. That is where Corbett lost the title to Fitzsimmons. Goldfield is and will be remembered the place where Tex Rickard promoted Gans and Nelson in his first show, a 42-rounder for a guarantee of $30,000 at Colma, Cal. It is known over because lots of big fights were held there.

Maspehl, L. L., calls up memories of Terry McGovern and Chantilly, France means nothing to a rubber player, but the name of the place where Charlie Mitchell, a little guy, gave the bucko John L. Sullivan a glorious pastime and got a draw.

And the what else is Las Vegas, New Mexico, but the site of Jack Johnson's fight with Jim Flynn?

Whoever heard of Boyle's Thirty Acres before Dempsey took the Frenchman there and who can ever forget it? Several other occasions since coming to this country, but he has had the misfortune not to get going at his best in our open championship.

Kirkwood is not a particularly pleasing stylist, but his game is sound. He uses a very flat swing, and generally keeps the ball low, and has shown fine skill in playing into the wind. Lying as it does, right on the edge of the Atlantic ocean, the Inwood Country club, on Long Island, where this year's championship will be played, is quite likely to have the edge on him.

THE LAWS OF GOLF

By INNIS BROWN

Q.—Please explain just what may be lifted and what may be brushed away on the putting green.

A.—A player is allowed to lift with his hands any loose thing or object on the putting green. He is entitled to scrape away with a putter the following things which it might be disagreeable to remove by hand: ice, snow, dung and worm casts. Hence, anything else must be lifted by hand. It removed at all.

Q.—In a medal play handicap tournament at our club recently, in which several visitors took part, two of them, not being familiar with the course, made the mistake on one hole of playing onto the green of another hole than the one they were playing. They learned of their mistake when they came up to the green, went back and dropped as near as they could determine where their balls were when the mistake occurred. What penalty, if any, did they incur?

Q.—Will you kindly settle the following argument? Player drives from one tee and slices his ball into the rough, where it lands in a small pool of casual water some twenty or thirty yards back of a tree. He picks up the ball and dropped to one side of the pool, giving him a line of play in which the tree interfered very little. His opponent questioned his right to drop to one side. Who was right?

A.—The player was not obliged to drop behind the casual water. The rule only specifies that he drop not more than two club lengths away, not nearer the hole.

Send in your questions to Innis Brown. If an immediate answer is desired, enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope.

A Tip for the Round. Great attention attaches to foot action in the golf swing, and to this end the weight should be kept well back on the heels. The bending in the left knee and the raising of the left heel on the back swing should not come too early in the back swing. A little restraint in these respects early in the back swing will have a beneficial influence on the turning movement of the body and arms.

PICTURES OF FIGHT LOST

Los Angeles, Cal., July 6.—Three aviators and two sets of photographs of the Dempsey-Gibbons fight at Shelby are believed to be marooned in the great American desert.

Two planes which set out from Salt Lake City Thursday have not been heard from and fear is held for the safety of the pilots. The first, a small Bristol high-speed plane, carrying pictures for the Newspaper Enterprise association, left Salt Lake at 11:40. The second, a large "Cloudster" piloted by Frank Clark, set out in the afternoon with flight pictures for a Los Angeles newspaper.

The Union Pacific sent out tracers along its Salt Lake-Los Angeles route Friday, but failed to pick up any news trace of the missing planes and men.

While the pilots may have been forced to descend and have escaped physical injury, they face death from thirst and starvation if they came down far from the railroad and lost their direction in the scorching desert sands. Both planes carried "stills" and not the motion picture films for which government agents are on the lookout through the west.

Ethelinda and Anna Bradford Girl Are Among Other Grand Circuit Winners.

North Randall, Cleveland, July 6. (By the Associated Press.)—Fred Egan, the former western reisman, now of Memphis, moved back to victory and a new record in the Taven stake, feature of today's Grand Circuit harness racing program at North Randall. The card contained three stakes, other than the Fasig sweepstakes for three-year-old trotters won by Ethelinda and the Pearl Benbow stepped the first heat in the Taven event in 2:05 1-5, which lowers the record for the stake of 2:05 3-4, established last year by The Great Rose. Eighth was the best mare could do in the second mile, because of a break shortly after the start, but in the third heat Pearl Benbow clipped 1:35 seconds off the record she had just set.

The time was all the more remarkable because of the condition of the track. Rain yesterday and early today caused a delay in starting the card of nearly two hours.

Ethelinda was piloted to victory in the Fasig by W. H. Cane, of New York, her owner, in straight heats. Her stable companion, the Guy, driven by Walter Cox, the stable's driver, finished third in each heat.

Experiment stakes for three-year-old pacers was won by Anna Bradford Girl. It was the inaugural of a stake for three-year-old pacers, a series of similar stakes to be raced at all Grand Circuit tracks.

Sold for $25,000.

After Pearl Benbow's victory in the Taven, she was purchased from John Ryan, of Minneapolis, by Thomas W. Murphy, the Syracuse reinsman. The reported price was $25,000. Pearl Benbow is a bay mare by Bobo, her dam being out of Montana, Grattan.

N. E. A. CONVENTION ELECTS PRESIDENT

Oakland, Cal., July 6.—The 1923 convention of the National Educational association, the World Education association on Education and allied educational organizations here in San Francisco closed tonight after electing Miss Olive N. Jones, New York school principal, as president of the N. E. A., to succeed William B. Owen, of Chicago.

Germela S. Adair, of Virginia, was chosen treasurer. Vice presidents elected include R. O. Stoops, Pennsylvania, and Florence H. Hale, Maine.

One of the outstanding accomplishments of the convention was the organization of the World Federation of Education associations, whose chief object is to prevent wars through educational methods. Augustus O. Thomas, Augusta, Maine, is president of the international body.

Des Moines, Iowa, July 6.—American efforts to enforce prohibition are receiving growing support from the British people, despite the controversy over ship liquor sales. Sir Lionel Fletcher, president of the Christian Endeavor society of Great Britain and Ireland, told 10,000 delegates to the international convention here Thursday night.

"Do not be deceived by the ships loaded with liquor that come to your ports," Sir Lionel said.

The Christian people of Great Britain will soon convince the politicians that the prohibition laws of the United States must be observed.

The resolution adopted Thursday night commended President Harding for his support of the eighteenth amendment and the Volstead act and rapped Governor Al Smith of New York, the spokesman of the "forces of nullification," which have "united powerful interests at home and abroad to break the moral and conscientious enforcing agents, and to discourage public sentiment."

We declare here that state righteousness is greater than state's rights; the resolution reads, "and that no state has rights which prohibition does not strengthen."

The resolution declared no candidate or party which does not unequivocally stand for prohibition enforcement will receive the support of the 4,000,000 members of Christian Endeavor, the society's new slogan, announced as the society's new slogan.

Godlessness is responsible for the breaking up of homes, declared Bishop of the Episcopal church, Rev. E. A. Tamm, of New York.

"Unless the supreme motive of life is God, there can be no peace," said the bishop. "The peace of homes is broken when there is no family altar. This absence of God from men and women into the sins whose horrible details fill our newspapers. The next step is to divorce courts."

"Not only is Godlessness responsible for broken homes, but the troubles of the nations of Europe is due to the same cause. The only hope is to have the peace of the hearts of men and women as their supreme motive. The gospel of Jesus Christ is the only hope of the world."

The resolution was adopted at the 1923 convention city.

GAINEVILLE EAGLE AND HERALD COMBINE

Gainesville, Ga., July 6.—(Special.)—The Gainesville Eagle and the Gainesville Herald have been purchased by H. H. Dean and Guy Clapton, and its publication will be continued by its purchasers.

At a meeting of the stockholders of The Gainesville Herald, it was decided to suspend the publication of The Herald and transfer all assets to the purchasers of the Gainesville Eagle. The Eagle is the oldest newspaper in Georgia north of Atlanta, and has a large subscription list and also a number of good advertising contracts. It is the official organ of Hall county.

The suspension of The Herald will leave two live newspapers in the city of Gainesville, the Gainesville Eagle and The Gainesville News. The effort to publish three newspapers in the city has proven unprofitable, but with the elimination of one of them, the other two will undoubtedly prosper.

Oscar Tuero Is Effective While the Cracker Sloggers Pound on Morrison at Will Cuban Twirler for Locals Allows Only Four Well Scattered Hits, Two of Which Were of the Scratch Variety.

CLIFF WHEATLEY.
"Stuffy" Stewart, Birmingham baseball boss, discovered yesterday afternoon at Ponce de Leon that the problem his predecessor, Joe Dunn, left unsolved is just as perplexing as it ever was. In fact, the puzzle has taken on some new twists and turns since the Barons were last in our midst.

The evil influence the Cracker had over the Barons was again in evidence as home boys and visitors battled through the first game of their series Friday, and the "Indian sign" proved effective, the Cracker winning by 9 to 2, without having to work any too hard to achieve the triumph.

The defeat marked the eighth straight time the Cracker had beaten the Barons. The teams have battled in nine games. The Cracker won the first, after all appearances, they had the rest safely away, but since that time the Barons have failed to accomplish any damage.

There is something "spooky" about the whole thing. It reminds of quite a bit of the poor success the Cracker has had in playing New Orleans. Against other clubs in the circuit, the Barons are rated by "smart money" as a team that because Stewart's men apparently save all their bad baseball for their bouts with the Cracker. Atlanta, if you care to think about the matter for an instant, generally does likewise when facing the Pelicans.

Morrison Is Ineffective.
The Barons looked bad at times Friday, but their troubles may be traced principally to ineffective work of Philip Morrison, who can easily recall when defeating the Cracker was about the simplest task he could be given. The magic Phil formerly used as food for the ball isn't there any more. At least it is not when he goes forth now to trounce a one-time set-up.

Shaky work of the Barons' infielders in the first two innings put Philip in deep water, but after a bit his fielders made some very excellent play. Their return to form had no effect on Morrison, however, as the Cracker had by this time found the correct range and a right manner of handling of Philip's curve ball ensued.

Twelve safe snacks were recorded by the Cracker, and not all were weak affairs. Glenn Killinger, for instance, hit a terrific liner to left center in the fifth and crossed the plate straightaway. His run was very excellent pastime. Their return to form had no effect on Morrison, however, as the Cracker had by this time found the correct range and a right manner of handling of Philip's curve ball ensued.

Roth, Army Balloonist, And His Aide Are Lost

Lieutenant Robert S. Olmstead Leads Field in Indianapolis Balloon Race.

Indianapolis, July 6.—(By the Associated Press.)—All trace of Lieutenant R. J. Roth, navy aviator and only starter in the national elimination balloon race who has not been heard from, has been lost, according to announcement made late this afternoon by the Indianapolis chamber of commerce, sponsor for the race.

Lieutenant Roth, 31, accompanied by his aide, Lieutenant Robert S. Olmstead, came here from the naval training station at Lakehurst, N. J. The missing balloonists, as is usual, were well supplied with cord bearing streamers, with instructions to drop them overboard as the craft drifted from cities to towns. Not a word, however, has been received here from the ship, known as the United States Navy Number A-508.

An unofficial check, compiled at the chamber of commerce, gave Lieutenant Roth a 100 percent chance of winning the race. The balloonist, who had a long record in the navy, was a member of the United States Navy Number A-508.

According to the check, H. E. Honeywell, St. Louis, piloting the balloon, traveled the next farthest distance—about 450 miles. He brought his balloon to the ground at Brooklyn, N. Y. Honeywell was the last pilot to report. Three other balloons, piloted by Lieutenant Lawrence, Washington naval officer; C. E. McCullough, Baltimore, and Lieutenant L. T. Miller, army man located at Scott field, Belleville, Ill., came to the ground about 400 miles from Indianapolis, it was said.

Honeywell and his aide, P. J. McCullough, had a hard time representing the United States in the international contest. They were in the air, according to a telegram received from them by the Associated Press. At the mercy of storms, the balloons were blown about in all directions. They were in the air, according to a telegram received from them by the Associated Press.

Belief was expressed by Honeywell that he had traveled about 500 miles and had won a place on the three balloons over the homecoming. The United States in the international contest in Belgium in September. He said both McCullough and he were badly sunburned and tired.

Manager Tuglie, of Center Hill, announces that John Davis will handle the pitching for his crew, which should mean a hard battle for pitcher's battle. HOME-MAKING WOMAN'S HIGHEST CALLING
SAYS GEORGIA'S 'FIRST LADY' IN INTERVIEW

By Bessie Shaw Stafford.

"Homemaking is the highest and truest profession for women in the world, and our daughters should be trained for that first of all," said Mrs. Clifford Walker, first lady of Georgia, who is the gentlest, most feminine and appealing of women. She talked yesterday and gave to The Constitution her first interview since the inauguration on subjects which will be of great interest to all Georgians whose attentions at present is focussed upon the executive mansion.

"It can only enrich their own lives," she continued, "and the lives of those about them no matter where their lives may fall. I do not care to preach to other women, but I am first and last with me always," said Georgia's "leading lady," as her arms lovingly encircled her two handsome sons, Harold and Sanders.

This charming woman is not a stranger to social life, although she has never cared inordinately for what is called society. She expects to do her share as wife of the governor in expressing the hospitality which is a part of the business of bringing together the chief executive with his constituents. She will know how to embody in her own home as first lady of the state those highest ideals of home life, in the promotion of which the women of Georgia have always excelled. This life will not be strange to Mrs. Walker since in her own right she has enjoyed it from birth through the participation of her family in state affairs.

Pre-School Circle.

The pre-school circle in Georgia Parent-Teacher work, of which she is state chairman, is possibly the second most important matter in Mrs. Walker's life outside of her family and home. She is extremely modest concerning the signal success she has made of her chairmanship, for she bases the success she has accomplished through experience and her earnest desire to help other mothers avoid mistakes so easily made.

"The pre-school circle work has already passed its infancy. The work in Georgia itself is receiving attention from distant states," declared Mrs. Walker. "I had a letter from the New York Child Hygiene association two weeks ago, asking what the Georgia pre-school circle had accomplished. In reply, I outlined that we had endeavored to develop the child four-square, which is

It is gratifying to me that these well organized outside associations recognize the medium through which information may be transmitted to parents along lines of improved health conditions for their children. Another outstanding point is that the department of the interior at Washington has also written for an article on this subject, which will be published in an early fall edition of the school magazine devoted entirely to Parent-Teacher work. We are desperately in need of funds to place a trained organizer in the state, through whom this division of the work would grow by leaps and bounds. Women of Georgia already know how well the Parent-Teacher work is organized, for it has flourishing associations in cities and rural districts and acts as a quickening influence in the promotion of the best interests of schools.

Her View of Citizenship.

When I asked her to express herself on citizenship and the obligation of women of Georgia to take an active part in public affairs, her reply was:

"Suffrage for women will succeed only in so far as it can bring about conditions which will protect the motherhood of the nation. Conditions which will provide for the mother the very best attention that medical science can suggest; conditions that will allow her to remain in the home while her children need her fostering care; conditions which will allow her community co-operation against those evils that lie in wait for our boys and girls so soon as they pass from the doors of our homes. I repeat that suffrage for women will succeed only in so far as it provides conditions which will allow mothers to rear a stronger, finer race of men, as they shall increase daily in stature, in wisdom, in favor with man, and in favor with God.

"When maternity is given the attention it should have and the protection, there will be fewer advocates of birth restriction and less to fear for our nation from that source. Certainly the quality of mankind will be bettered and the death rate will be much lowered helping us to strike an even balance in the matter of citizenship."

What Women Wear

BY ANNE RITTENHOUSE

Wear Your Bandanna on Your Hat or on Your Hair When You Motor.

Some women solve the problem of appropriate hats for motoring by wearing no hats at all. But few women have their hair so firmly netted down to their scalps that they can go quite bareheaded. And for them the Suzanne Lenglen bandanna makes strong appeal. It proves itself eminently serviceable and it seems to many who adopt it to be eminently smart.

Here in America we call it the Suzanne Lenglen bandanna and have ever since the French tennis champion first made her first hysterical appearance in this country. In France, neither Suzanne nor any other tennis player is given credit with having originated it. When French women first took to playing tennis a few years ago with post-war enthusiasm for things American, they devised clever ways of confining the hair while playing. It was a very simple trick with them to twist an enormous bandanna and tie it around the crown. In England someone christened this band tied about the crown as the "headache band," and so it has been known. So widely has it been adopted by English women in lieu of a hat for sports and country wear that an eminent though pessimistic physician there has expressed his anxiety lest English women become deaf in consequence.

Somewhat these bandanna substitutes for hats look better when worn on the tennis court than they do as an all-day substitute for hats. On every highway when you motor you pass pretty girls and plain girls aplenty bareheaded save for some sort of bandanna. Some young women have even adopted the plan of getting their dressmakers to save a triangle or square or oblong of the material of each of their frocks for this very purpose.

But there are still advantages in wearing a hat when motoring, especially along country roads in summer. You may still wear your bandanna, if not swirled around your head, then swirled around the crown of your hat with all the rest of it drawn through a little slip in the brim of the hat close to the crown.

One thinks of these long pendant scarfs that women wear from their hats, sweeping this shoulder or that, as being merely decorative. But they may be turned to good account. Sometimes they offer some slight protection against a too persistent breeze, and

CHAPTER XVIII.

A Strange Suspicion.

Gloria did not question Guy's selection of a hotel for her. She was rather glad that he would be in one nearby, for she had never been in New York alone, and although she knew the city well, she had no desire, now that she had reached it, to be quite without companionship.

She registered and turned to take leave of Guy, when a familiar voice exclaimed "Gloria!" And across the heaps of luggage that passengers on incoming trains and steamers had deposited near the desk, she saw Virginia.

For a moment she wanted to turn and run; then she greeted her cousin and Morton Phelps, avoiding his smiling eyes. Was she never to be able to escape him?

"I thought you were going west, Jinny—how do you happen to be here?" asked Gloria.

"Oh, we just changed our minds," her cousin replied, but Gloria was sure that there was something behind that remark. "And what are you doing here—I thought you were to stay at Crossways all summer?"

Gloria wearily repeated her plans for going to Lorraine Slater's house party. Virginia stared at her.

Lorraine Slater, my child, her house parties are—oh, well, I suppose you're old enough to know

As Virginia's maid rubbed her with fragrant oil, brushed her hair and brandished a huge powder puff, Gloria wondered if she would ever be able to escape from the conditions that she had always governed her life.

She could just have "one month of perfect freedom, with all the excitement she wanted, and new friends, a new home, new clothes to make the change complete. One month of perfect freedom, with all the excitement she wanted, and new friends, a new home, new clothes to make the change complete.

When she went to the sitting room of Virginia's suite, she found Morton Phelps shaking cocktails, while Guy carefully filled two flasks at a side table. Virginia, lying back in a low chair, was fitting a cigarette to a jade green holder that brought out all the green in her hazel eyes. Cool, blasé, rather too sophisticated, she hardly looked like a radiant bride, thought Gloria.

Later, when they were dining and dancing at the roof restaurant that Virginia had selected, Gloria studied her carefully. Virginia never lost her aloofness save once or twice when she looked at her husband. His eyes were quizzical when he looked at her, his manner almost too polite. It seemed to Gloria that she was begging for something, and that he was laughing at her entreaties.

And when, as she herself was dancing with him, she saw that expression that swept over Virginia's face, she was quizzical when he looked at her, his manner almost too polite. It seemed to Gloria that she was begging for something, and that he was laughing at her entreaties.

What you want to do, even though you haven't come out yet? What are you doing tonight—you'll come with us though, of course, won't you?"

Gloria hesitated. If there was one thing that she did not want to do at that moment, it was to go with Virginia and Morton Phelps. But Virginia had turned to Guy Richardson and was outlining her plans for the evening to him, and Gloria found herself facing Morton's quizzical eyes. "Afraid to go, Gloria?" he asked, softly. Her eyes dropped beneath the warmth of his gaze. "That means that you still care, if you do."

"Yes, I'd love to go with you, Jinny," she exclaimed, trying to force some enthusiasm into her voice. "But you'll have to end me your maid for an hour or so; I'm in need of remodeling."

"She doesn't look it, does she, Virginia?" commented Phelps, but his wife made no reply.

Gloria found herself established in a suite on the same corridor as that occupied by Virginia and her husband. She sighed as she realized that her plans for running away from conditions of her own life were completely upset. Here she was under Virginia's thumb once more!

Later, when they were dining and dancing at the roof restaurant that Virginia had selected, Gloria studied her carefully. Virginia never lost her aloofness save once or twice when she looked at her husband. His eyes were quizzical when he looked at her, his manner almost too polite. It seemed to Gloria that she was begging for something, and that he was laughing at her entreaties.

What you want to do, even though you haven't come out yet? What are you doing tonight—you'll come with us though, of course, won't you?"

Gloria hesitated. If there was one thing that she did not want to do at that moment, it was to go with Virginia and Morton Phelps. But Virginia had turned to Guy Richardson and was outlining her plans for the evening to him, and Gloria found herself facing Morton's quizzical eyes. "Afraid to go, Gloria?" he asked, softly. Her eyes dropped beneath the warmth of his gaze. "That means that you still care, if you do."

"Yes, I'd love to go with you, Jinny," she exclaimed, trying to force some enthusiasm into her voice. "But you'll have to end me your maid for an hour or so; I'm in need of remodeling."

"She doesn't look it, does she, Virginia?" commented Phelps, but his wife made no reply.

Gloria found herself established in a suite on the same corridor as that occupied by Virginia and her husband. She sighed as she realized that her plans for running away from conditions of her own life were completely upset. Here she was under Virginia's thumb once more!

As Virginia's maid rubbed her with fragrant oil, brushed her hair and brandished a huge powder puff, Gloria wondered if she would ever be able to escape from the conditions that she had always governed her life.

She could just have "one month of perfect freedom, with all the excitement she wanted, and new friends, a new home, new clothes to make the change complete. One month of perfect freedom, with all the excitement she wanted, and new friends, a new home, new clothes to make the change complete.

When she went to the sitting room of Virginia's suite, she found Morton Phelps shaking cocktails, while Guy carefully filled two flasks at a side table. Virginia, lying back in a low chair, was fitting a cigarette to a jade green holder that brought out all the green in her hazel eyes. Cool, blasé, rather too sophisticated, she hardly looked like a radiant bride, thought Gloria.

Riddles

BY IRVING BACHELLER

Next Week, "The Ragged Edge"
By Harold MacGrath

It was late in August when Riddles set out for Coulterville in his big, new limousine with three guests: Galt, the mayor of Belle Harbor, and the president of the First National bank of that flourishing city. On the way he told them the story of his adventures in the hills of New England. Riddles introduced himself and his friends to the prosecuting attorney.

"Here are papers which will prove his identity," said the mayor of Belle Harbor as he passed sundry documents to the smiling prosecutor.

The latter examined them hurriedly, arose from his chair and said politely: "Mr. Riddles, if these gentlemen will excuse us for half an hour or so, I should like to talk with you in my private office."

The two retired to an inner room. The attorney closed his door, and placed a chair close to his own for Riddles.

"I am glad you have come," he began with a smile. "I am in disgrace with the political leaders of this county and you are in a degree responsible for it. Therefore, I feel that I have a right to all the help you can give me. I've got to square myself with old David Galt, or, if you prefer, with me as a failure. He calls me a bum prosecutor. Here are the facts as I have them: You were walking on the state road from the west on or about the 17th of June. You rode with a peddler to a point on the river shore known as Pine Grove. There you left him for rest. While you were resting a tramp came along. You had a talk with him. He interested you in his welfare to such an extent, that you bought a farm suit from the peddler on his return from Hope Center, and gave the clothes off your back to the tramp. They were good clothes and suited him. It was a singular act, and a blow to law and order in this county. It enabled a criminal to get away. He was a well-set-up man of about your own build. He had been bathed and shaved and shorn. He probably looked like a gentleman. I presume you loaned him money. The tramp left, and probably got a ride out of this part of the country while passing as a tourist. You, seeking exercise and new adventures, had assumed the dress and manners of a hired man and the name of Reuben Smith. What I should like to know is this. How did you chance to take the name of Reuben Smith?"

"The tramp suggested it," said Riddles.

"Was he a friend of yours?"

"No, he was not a friend of mine." "Then he was a clever man!" the attorney exclaimed with a laugh. "It had been the name under which he had committed a serious crime. Now before you had left the grove, Mr. J. Reginald Travels—a wealthy, prominent man—walking for his health, came along and got acquainted with you. Then both joined a picnic party from which you went home with Mrs. Pulister and the Cornings. Now, I have a question to ask. Have you any further knowledge of the tramp you befriended? Have you seen him, or heard from him since the 17th of June?"

"That question I shall not answer unless I am compelled to," Riddles replied.

"Then we shall put you under oath," said the attorney. "Surely, you do not wish to defeat the procession of justice."

"No, but if you knew the man as well as I do, I am inclined to think that you would not wish to disgrace and punish him even if it were possible."

"Still, that is a matter for me to decide," the attorney stated. "The examination will come on tomorrow. Then, of course, you will have to tell the truth. Meanwhile, you had better let me know what is coming. It will be easier for all of us."

"I am in a rather embarrassing position. Give me a few hours in which to think it over," said Riddles.

"Only give me your word that you will appear at the justice's office at ten in the morning. It would delay and embarrass us if you were to leave the state."

"I give you my word for that," said Riddles.

"Your word is sufficient. Some of us know you pretty well here. And, by the way, our leading citizen—Mr. David Galt—is giving a dinner to-night at the Country club to his new brother-in-law, Mr. J. Reginald Travels—a man, you know, who is highly esteemed here, and I am sure that I shall be expressing his wishes when I ask you and your friends to that dinner."

"I think I can speak for my friends and tell you that we shall be glad to join your party," Riddles answered.

der. She stepped forward and gave him her hand with a merry smile, and with a pretty touch of dignity in her manner.

"My goodness!" she exclaimed, "What a change! But you never deceived me. I knew that you were a gentleman."

"And I owe you many apologies," said Mrs. Martin.

"Being in your debt, the apologies should come from me," Riddles answered. "I have brought a young man with me who wishes to meet your daughter. Turning to Miss Harriet he added: 'You have heard me speak of him. May I introduce my friend, Mr. John Galt?'"

"We shall be glad to meet him," said the young lady.

Mr. Galt stepped out of the car and was presented. Miss Harriet greeted him rather coolly. The party sat down on the veranda.

"We have mutual friends," Galt said to the young lady. "The Gordons of New York. I expected to meet you in their house last winter, but was called away. I have seen you, now and then, at St. Bartholomew's. The last time I saw you was on the dock of the Cunard company. You were saying good-bye to some friends."

"He never forgets a face worth remembering," said Riddles.

"Do we not all see faces in the crowd that passes us which we love to remember?" Galt asked.

"And, soon or late, we see the one face that has the great light in it," said Riddles. "Gee! I've slipped into poetry, but I can put a stop to that. I am going down to look at the pigs. They would put out the fire of a Tennessee. That's what's the matter with America—too many pigs! Too many antidotes for poetry!"

"If you don't mind, and mother and Mr. Galt will excuse us, I'll go along with him. While you are resting, I'll think a look at the pigs would do me good."

They walked down a lane between two fields of rice.

"I like this place," said Riddles. "The distant hills and the meadow flats and the fine old house and its inhabitants. It's like the farm I was raised on."

"Some time I should like to see that farm," said the young lady.

"I'd like to show it to you. It's not so far from here."

"We're naturally interested in you, Smith—excuse me—I believe I am to call you Mr. Riddles hereafter—we have heard so many things about our hired man since he left."

"What have you heard?"

"Oh, all about your wealth and public spirit and general greatness. The world is little, and the prosecuting attorney was on your trail. It's all very strange and wonderful."

"It's like seeing in the moonlight when every object takes on a look of grandeur. I warn you that I am a very small and foolish man. I have brought a real man with me. I have tried him out. He is wise and gentle and big-hearted. He fell in love with the look of you more than a year ago."

"Poor fellow! Somehow his look does not impress me," said Miss Harriet.

"Why?"

"I don't know. Perhaps, it's because he isn't big enough and then—his eyes are slow."

"How? You've only known him for a quarter of an hour. Give him a chance to show you his life."

"Well, you know, I'm only a girl; but if I saw a young man that I liked and knew where to find him, I wouldn't take me a year to make his acquaintance. Not on your life."

"But he has had a lot to do in the last year."

"And had judgment as to the main issue. He doesn't know what to neglect. He may be a good business man, but as a lover he is a joke. Thanks for your kindness, but I am disappointed. You have gone and brought the wrong man."

"What a riddle is a woman's heart! I want you to ask him to dinner and really get acquainted before you form an opinion."

"It will do no good. Don't worry about me. My plans are made."

"Perhaps you are already engaged?"

"Not quite. But my mind is made up. I know what I am going to do."

There goes that babe person— you'd think she owned the street— in spite of her stylish clothes and careful makeup and woman can tell she looks about as natural as an artificial arm— so that's the type of a woman men admire nowadays—

IF THEY HAVE A GOOD DRESSMAKER AND A FIRST-CLASS MAKEUP MEN SEEM TO THINK THEY'RE WONDERFUL— IF THEY LOOK GOOD IN A BATHING SUIT THEY DON'T WORRY ABOUT HOW THEY'LL LOOK IN A KITCHEN APRON— BUT I FIT THE MAN WHO MARRIES ONE OF THEM—

AFTER THE HONEYMOON HE'LL EAT ALL HIS MEALS OUT OF A PAPER BAG OR A TIN CAN— IF THE DELICATESSEN STORE CLOSERS HE'LL STARVE TO DEATH— THAT KIND OF A WOMAN THINKS A HUSBAND IS LIKE A CALENDAR— THEY WANT A NEW ONE EVERY YEAR— I WONDER IF THEY EVER STOP TO THINK OF ALL THE MISERY THEY CAUSE— BY FLATTERING SOME MAN WHO SHOULD BE OLD ENOUGH TO KNOW BETTER THEY SEND HIM HOME EXPECTING TO FIND HIS WIFE SINGING WITH JOY BECAUSE HE PICKED HER OUT TO DO HIS HOUSEWORK— IF HER HANDS ARE RED FROM WASHING DISHES THEY REMIND HIM OF SOME OTHER WOMAN'S RED SHOES—

Can you come to dinner this evening, and you may bring your friend if you care to?"

"I am sorry. We are to dine with Mr. David Galt at the Country club. He is paying a compliment to his new brother-in-law."

"Oh, then I will see you there. I had not quite decided to go. I think our time is up. They will be looking for us and we haven't seen the pigs. On the whole, I think we had better not look at the pigs."

Mrs. Martin and John Galt met them at the head of the lane.

"We have good servants now and could not think of letting you go until after luncheon," Mrs. Martin said.

"You're forgiven on condition that you two will take a walk until we are ready."

When the young men returned from their walk the ladies met them at the door.

"Now we are trying to show a proper respect for our hired man," said Miss Harriet.

"It's a beautiful gown. You couldn't look lovelier."

"But my blood is drying up with sorrow," the young lady answered. "The butler has left. Struck for more money, and when I refused it, he cleared out bag and baggage."

"Good! Here's where I get back on my old job," said Riddles as he rose from the table. "Please let me, I shall love it."

Riddles would take no part in the talk until each course was served, and he had sat down at the table. He kept the party laughing with his playful humor, and finally "gave notice" that he would have to look for another place.

"You are like all the butlers," said Miss Harriet. "We pay you the price you ask and then you want more."

"I do not have privileges enough," said Riddles with a laugh.

"You may think better of that," the young lady answered. "Monday we have what is called a 'Take-It-Back Day' in Coulterville. It will be a day for the righting of old wrongs—a day of 'owning up' and paying back and turning new leaves in the book of life. The Y. M. C. A. and the Christian Endeavor people have been working up a lot of surprises. The ceremonies are to be held in the park. You will have a chance to see your errors and confess them."

"That's too big a contract," said Riddles. "It would take me a week to get through."

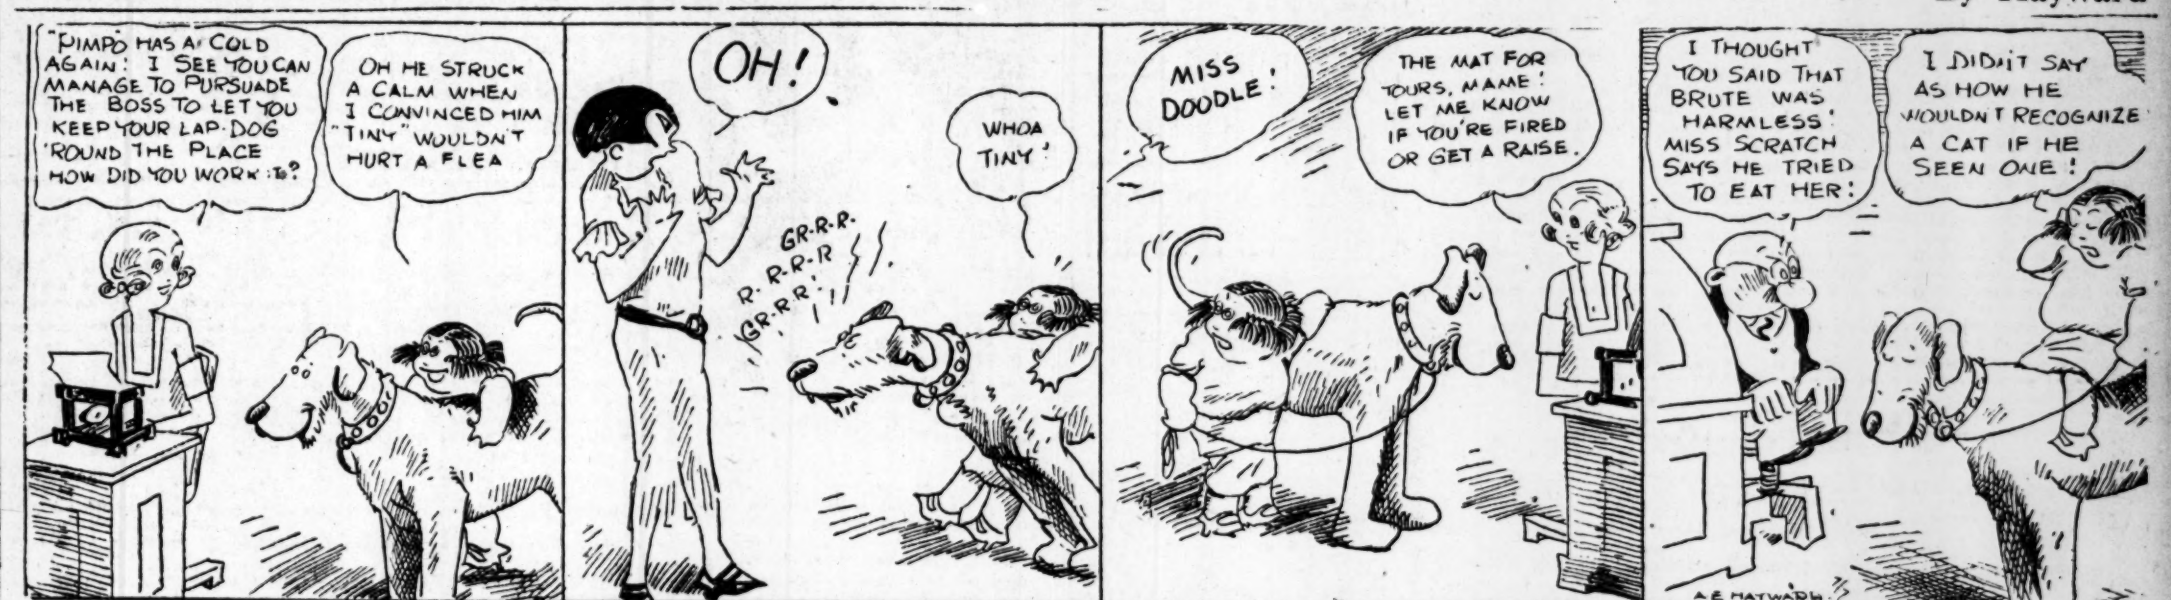

Near the middle of the afternoon the young men started for Coulterville.

"She is all that I thought, but I can see that my case is hopeless," said Galt as they were riding along. "I am like poor Standish. I sent the wrong ambassador."

JUST NUTS

Broad Road or Rut

THE FOURTH OF JULY CHOICE.

(The following is issued by the committee on church co-operation):

Our biggest battle is against the narrow mind. The devil's strongest stronghold is the narrow soul. His whole plan of attack is to lead the life into the narrow track, that ends in the rut, which men call hell.

And the bigger the man, the bigger the battle, the more cunning and stronger the attack of Satan. Take his approach to Jesus, to whom he showed the kingdoms of the world and their glory, and said:

"All these things will I give thee, if thou wilt fall down and worship me."

But Jesus answered:

"Get thee hence, Satan: for it is written, thou shalt worship the Lord thy God, and Him only shalt thou serve."

The kingdoms of the world and their glory could not induce the Son of Man to enter the narrow rut of devil worship, which means hell on earth and hell hereafter.

"When I have said, I'll go, I'm going to quit and do something for others."

These have yielded to a far less temptation than that offered to Jesus. He refused the whole world offered as a price for entering the rut. But these have been won by the glitter of gold, which, though it might grow to be greater than the faded wreath of Croesus, would still be only a fraction of that offered to Jesus, and not enough to pay for the soul, shivering and dying in the ever-narrowing rut, the hell of Mammon worship.

Against the Rut.

It was against the narrowing rut, which means death and hell, that Jesus was appealing, when, teaching the limitless power of prayer, He said:

"Therefore, all things whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them: for this is the law and the prophets. Enter ye in at the strait gate: for wide is the gate, and broad is the way, that leadeth to destruction, and many there be which go in thereat; because strait is the gate, and narrow is the way, which leadeth unto life, and few there be that find it."

On the body of a soldier killed in France was found a verse, which said:

"Ye that have faith to look with fearless eyes
Beyond the tragedy of a world at strife,
And know that out of death shall rise
The dawn of ampler life:
Rejoice, ye never anguish rend the heart,
That God has given you the price—less power
To live in these great times and have your part."

In Freedom's crowning hour,
That ye may tell your sons who see the light
High in the heavens—their heritage to take—
I saw the powers of darkness take their flight;
I saw the morning break."

He was an Australian, fighting in the armies of the British empire. Side by side, and dying with him for humanity's sake, were American soldiers, whose forefathers, 146 years ago, were battling against that empire, and appealing to Almighty God.

"The Supreme Judge of the world," for justice in their struggle for freedom.

And all America, in 1917-1918, with the whole world thrilled and throbbing with the glory of the greater vision, the vision of a world made safe for democracy, a world from which the powers of darkness should be driven.

The Narrow Minds.

In 1917, there were men of narrow minds, who could not see the glory of the coming dawn. So, too, there were in 1917-1918. Although the dawn had spread so far that British, French, American, Italian, Belgian, Japanese and Chinese were fighting side by side for the freedom of humanity, there were in every nation mentioned men of little minds and vision, who had no conception of the glory of the cause for which they were fighting, that glory of the spreading dawn which made death glorious for that dying.

So today there are many who would turn again to the narrow rut of the past which again and again has plunged our world into the hell of war. They deny the brotherhood of man. Other nations, for them, are outside the pale.

Nationality, for them, means not a glorious organization under the stars and bars for the service of all mankind, but a pitiful little machine for money-grubbing and nation building for the benefit of their nation's name.

We say "pitifully little" advisedly. For however great and powerful such a machine might become, it is still the nation that enters upon such a course, trapped by Satan, has entered the "wide gate," which through the narrowing rut ends in the rut of devil worship, which is hell.

Such, by the grace of God, shall never be America's fate.

ROUTE IS SELECTED FOR DAVIS HIGHWAY

Dublin, Ga., July 6.—(Special.)—As a climax to what is called by members of the Jefferson Davis Highway association, the most enthusiastic meeting of that body held since its organization, a resolution was passed tentatively fixing the general route of the memorial road from Abbeville to Augusta.

The resolution proposed by Dudley Smith, of Dodge county, and adopted by the highway association, called for the routing of the highway via Abbeville, Eastman, Dublin, Wrightsville, Louisville, Wrens and Augusta.

The meeting was called to order in the Laurens county courthouse at 11 o'clock this morning by E. G. Simmons, president of the Dublin Chamber of Commerce. Judge J. E. Burch, of this city, was elected chairman of the meeting, and W. H. Proctor, secretary of the chamber of commerce, secretary. More than 75 delegates, representing every county along the proposed route, were in attendance.

Idor Gelders, general secretary of the Jefferson Davis Highway association, made the opening address of the meeting, in which he traced something of the history of road building in the south and gave a series of reasons why the highway should be constructed as a memorial to the great chief of the Confederacy.

"It was along this general route," declared Mr. Gelders, "that Jefferson Davis spent the last days before his capture by federal forces. It was but eight miles from Abbeville where the great chief spent the last night before he was made a prisoner."

"For days before he traveled along this road. Because of the traditions of the old south wrapped in this strip of land no better, or more lasting memorial could be erected to Jefferson Davis."

Mr. Gelders explained that from his home town, Abbeville, the road is to branch to both Augusta and Savannah. Fixing the route to be the Augusta-Richmond division.

The roads above Augusta to Richmond and Washington are complete, he said, and the Jefferson Davis highway should be routed through those counties, and the reason advanced was that such a route would be already completed, and more new under construction with both state and federal aid.

Negro Shoots and Robs Man, Steals Auto, but Is Wrecked on Curve

Hilberton, Ga., July 6.—(Special.) Bud Ginn, a prominent citizen of Vanna, near here, was seriously shot by a negro, who was riding with him to show him the way to Iva, late yesterday afternoon between Calhoun Falls and Lowndesville, S. C. Mr. Ginn says the negro appeared to be angry because he was not allowed to drive the car, and on a pretext got out and began shooting. One ball going through Mr. Ginn's right side, one striking the shoulder and another the arm.

The negro then robbed him, took the car and started for Atlanta. At a sharp curve he lost control and the car was wrecked at a high embankment. He was captured in about an hour and a half after the shooting. The last report was that Mr. Ginn was seriously shot, but it was thought that he will recover.

CITY WILL BUY BOOKS, SAYS SIMS

School books for the third and fourth grades probably will be purchased by the city this year on the same plan as were those for the first and second grades last year, Mayor Walter A. Sims said today when he informed that the board of education has no funds with which to pay for them.

Last year books were bought on credit and the money was appropriated in the January finance sheet. The first and second grade books cost about $60,000. The third and fourth grade books will cost about $90,000.

W. W. Gaines, president of the board of education, will ask the board at its meeting Tuesday to pass a resolution formally requesting council to arrange for purchase of the books. Indications Friday were that the board would pass it, and that the council would authorize the purchase with the understanding that payment will be made when the January, 1924, budget is prepared.

The charter amendment adopted last year provides that free books shall be furnished pupils in all grammar grades at the rate of two new grades each year. The school board has the funds to make the purchase in the January finance sheet. Gaines said the board of education will ask the board at its meeting Tuesday to pass a resolution formally requesting council to arrange for purchase of the books. Indications Friday were that the board would pass it, and that the council would authorize the purchase with the understanding that payment will be made when the January, 1924, budget is prepared.

PAVING CONTRACTS VETOED BY MAYOR

Two more street paving contracts with MacDougald Construction company were vetoed by Mayor Walter A. Sims today on the grounds that the Finley Construction company had offered to do the same work at a price of 30 cents per yard cheaper than the price specified by MacDougald.

The mayor some time ago announced a policy of vetoing every contract for asphalt paving until Finley is permitted to bid. The Finley process, according to the street committee, does not meet the requirements of the bond issue ordinance and the committee has for that reason refused to consider bids based on that process.

The contracts vetoed Friday were for paving portions of Seventeenth street and East Ontario avenue. The mayor approved contracts for concrete paving on Marietta street from Jones avenue to North avenue, and on Greenwood and Arlington avenues.

The ordinance permitting the Atlanta and West Point railroad to extend its tracks across Ashby street was also vetoed. The street committee is to hold a public hearing on the matter next Friday.

Leader of Elks Reaches Atlanta For Convention

J. Edgar Masters, grand exalted ruler of the Elks, of Charleston, S. C., arrived in Atlanta Friday, several hours after the arrival of the Whittington Zouaves, one of the most famous Elk patrols, which is encamped in Piedmont park. Together with Mr. Masters were officers of the grand lodge, and pre-convention activities are expected to get into motion at once and complete final plans for the fifty-ninth annual convention of the order.

Mr. Masters was met by a special entertainment committee for grand lodge officers, the general reception committee and the patrol of the Elks' lodge, and escorted to his rooms at the Ansley hotel, where his offices will be located during the session.

"Everything is in readiness," declared Fred C. Robinson, grand secretary of the lodge, who arrived here Wednesday, Friday night, "and I firmly believe that the convention will be one of the best ever held by the order. The Atlanta lodge is handling the reception and entertainment arrangements excellently." Plans for the huge parade to be staged during the convention, and which is expected to be one of the outstanding features of the entire week, are near completion. It was announced by Charles H. Grakelov, who is in charge of the parade. A line of march is being made, and it is indicated that more than 12,000 persons will march in the procession, he asserted.

Beginning Friday afternoon, the Zouaves will stage special exhibition drills at 4:45 o'clock each day except Sunday. The drills will take place on the athletic field at Piedmont park. They will consist of fancy evolutions, wall-scaling and numerous military maneuvers. The Jackson company, in command of Captain William Sparks, has been the national drill champions of the Elks for the past three years. The prize drill will be held at Piedmont park Tuesday afternoon.
